Rev. F. Bushfield's Farewell Sermon

On Sunday evening the Rev. F. Bushfield gave his farewell sermon to a large audience. Taking his text from 2 Cor. 10, "Quit ye like men; be strong."

In prefacing his remarks upon the text, the reverend gentleman said, that the present was a stock taking time for both pastor and people. It was not his intention to speak of what was accomplished in the past two years, as those things are still fresh in the minds of all. The two years' work in Cayley has been most pleasant, and was sure will always loom up as a bright spot in their lives. He had only one regret in leaving Cayley. Shortly after coming here two years ago, as he became acquainted with the work he was convinced that there was only work for one man. He had hoped that the work of the joint committee of the Presbyterian and Methodist churches would have solved the problem, but it failed, and to their disappointment, the situation was left as it was, and his regret was that two other denominations have seen fit to start work here since. Remember the spirit in which he said this. He was not saying anything against any denomination, but that he greatly regretted the present conditions. In his short experience of some eight years in the West he had found that where three or four denominations are working in a small place there is bound to be friction, regardless of how the ministers may strive to lead their people to prevent this.

Referring to his text, the speaker said: As in all ages, this age demands strong men. There is hardly a man or woman who is not anxious to be strong. As we look back in history, we find that physical strength was the strength that determined men's power. Kings and rulers were always men of physical strength. Saul was chosen king by reason of his greater height than that of his brethren. Physical strength made a man a leader, guide and power among men. But to-day, the men who are ruling are men of thought, with their intellects sharpened—often physically weak but mentally strong. There have been extremes in both ages. The ideal of real strength must be physical, mental and spiritual. This age demands upright, square men. As the motto of the Y. M. C. A.—Spirit, mind and body. This age, this world, Alberta, yea, Cayley—cries for strong men and women—in the social, political and religious world; in the home, in public, in municipal, and in local church life. Men, who are strong built.

"It is heaven below
My Savior to know"
In touch with Jesus Christ, the great ideal of all men. To be strong is a grand ideal. We all want to be strong. The athlete, in his training; the student, in his studies; and the religious man in his prayers to God—are endeavoring to be strong. These all entail hard work, but that of the Christian is hardest of all. Our greatest traitor is self. Look through a telescope, as it were,

and if we focus it properly we will find self to be the meanest man living. Of course, if we turn the large end to our eyes and look at the few good spots, we will not discover the weak points in the fortress. Watch the traitor—self, "be in the world, but not of it." "Quit you like men. Be strong," is the call of the 20th century to every man, woman, boy and girl in this house to-night; but we are not willing to pay the price. In the city, one sees an advertisement, "Man wanted." Hundreds apply, but if sign is qualified to certain requirements very few will apply; but if a man, who is a necessity, is wanted—remember he spoke of a man being a necessity only in a qualified sense, as no man is absolutely a necessity in this world—a personal application must be made and the man personally chosen by his employer. What class are you in to-night? The man wanted—needed—man that is a necessity? His experience shows that all want to be in the class where man is a necessity; but are we not willing to pay the price? In the case of a recent strike the foreman of a large body of workmen told the speaker that the good tradesman was not the one who complained, but the poor workman who wanted higher pay for poor work. Also in the case of the young man who was promoted to foreman after only three or four days' work at small pay, because he proved himself faithful, could be trusted to do his work honestly under all conditions. If we are faithful in the little things, although our lives may be covered for a time by wire-pulling, jealousy, etc., still we will burst the bonds of bondage and rise. Do not be satisfied with a second class man and desire to be pitched-forked into a high one. You will be sure to find that you cannot fill that position. You have not been qualified for it.

The burden of his message was—be faithful—faithful in private, business and social life. Let us strive to be a necessity; not wanted only or needed, but a necessity. It will pay. Oh, let us in the Christian life get a vision of what Jesus Christ would have us be! Let us live so close to Him that we will feel something of what He felt when He wept over Jerusalem, and as He cried in His sufferings, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." Let us feel the great beats of His loving heart. The power of God in and through our lives will live in others after we are gone. To be strong is to help others. Faithfulness to God will help us. "Quit your like men be strong." Let us get a new vision of service to-night, not that we must, but that we love to; it takes strength to do this—more than our strength, though we must have the great power of the great living God. Unsaved one, accept Him to-night, and be strong in His service. Christian if you have fallen from your ideal, start forth to serve Him wholeheartedly. May we all to-night be faithful to Him and strong in His service.

Address and Presentation

On Friday evening, at the home of Mr. G. W. Wickens, a very interesting ceremony was performed. Rev. and Mrs. Bushfield, who were about to leave Cayley after a two years' ministry here, were the recipients of a travelling bag, given by the members of the Ladies' Aid as a token of the esteem which they have justly merited during their work here.

A good program was much enjoyed by a large audience, the following artists contributing: Mesdames F. Bushfield and F. Walker, Misses H. Wickens and A. Stirling, Messrs J. W. and J. A. Wickens.

Miss Stirling, on behalf of the Aid, gave the following address: To Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bushfield: We, the members of the Ladies' Aid of Cayley, would hereby convey to you the regret we feel that you are about to leave us. For the past two years it has been our privilege to know you in genial friendship; and we feel that we have been greatly benefited by your kindly assistance, your cheerful and encouraging disposition. In the varied walks of friendly and social intercourse, you have contributed abundantly toward making life pleasant in the circle in which you have moved.

We take this opportunity, also, to make known to you our full appreciation of your past labors here and to express the gratification we have derived from the zeal you have ever manifested in the work of our society.

You are about to make your home among strangers once more. We trust they will soon become friends, but earnestly hope that

Sound Advice

FARMER—Well wife, the barn wants painting, the fence is down, the chickens are in the garden, the doors are off the granary, the pump's no good, we haven't a knife that we can cut the meat, the linoleum is full of holes, the house is swarming with flies, the chickens are covered with lice, we haven't got a decent chair to sit on, the buggy squeaks worse than a German bard, the cows swallowed the wire stretchers, and the pig eat the hammer. I think we'll quit farming.

WIFE—Let us go and see McMeekin & Scragg, and get the place fixed up. We're going to have a good crop this year, and I know the boys will treat us right.

Arrangements have been made for union services on the next two Sunday nights. On the first Sunday the service will be held in the Presbyterian hall, and the week following it will be in the Methodist church. Dr. Stanley will be the speaker on the first night. The meetings will be held at the usual hour, 7.30 p.m.

Football, Friday at 6.30

An exciting game of baseball took place on Saturday last at Parkland between Cayley and the former town. The score at the close stood 13 to 9 in favor of our boys. The visitors were highly pleased at the way they were treated by the Parkland boys, who all played and acted like gentlemen. There was a large attendance.

The postmaster is after those who do not pay up their phone fees. After July 1st those using the long-distance phone must divvy up the fee first—cash with order, the rural users who use the long distance must pay up when in town; and non-subscribers using the rural at central must cough up 5c first. By observing these necessary rules a whole pile of trouble will be saved.

From all appearances the local Conservatives are not going to be caught napping in the next Provincial campaign. We understand that a Conservative Association has already been organized at Cayley, and meetings are advertised at Tongue Creek hall on Thursday, June 15th, at Blackie on June 16th, and at Brant June 17th. The notices sent out call for a discussion of Provincial affairs.

Nanton Will Test Church Union

The first test of church union in Alberta will be made in Nanton during the next twelve months. The Alberta conference at its recent meeting in Calgary, made no provision for a minister at Nanton, although there are many Methodists in the town, and the denomination could very well support a minister.

The Methodists have decided, in order to prevent an overlap of work, to abandon their cause and unite with the Presbyterians and support one strong church. Whether Arminianism and Calvinism can worship together will be demonstrated at Nanton during the next year. The quarterly board of the Nanton Methodist church presented a request to the recent conference asking that this should take place. In response to their request Rev. A. Burner, president of the conference; Rev. J. P. Berry of High River, Rev. T. C. Buchanan, superintendent of missions, and Rev. G. W. Kerby visited Nanton on Thursday, June 8th, and after consultation with the board of the Methodist church decided to withdraw from the field for at least one year, and leave it to the Presbyterians.

It was decided that it would be a great waste of money to maintain two churches where one could satisfy the needs of the community.

Rev. E. Bishop, the late Methodist minister at Nanton, is a strong advocate of church union, and it was largely through his influence that the present union has taken place.

The members of the Methodist church will not, however, lose their identity as members of that denomination, and after a year, if they decide that the amalgamation is not a success, they will be given a minister and open their church again.

Swat the Fly Now

Now is the time to swat the fly. One swat now is worth thousands a month later. Land on him before he gets time to collect on his hairy legs the thousands of bacilli from the refuse piles, garbage boxes, and other germ-producing spots. The fly is the greatest spreader of disease known to modern science. He has killed more people than all the wars that have raged since the world began, and is still carrying on his work in a way that puts lyddite shells, rapid-firing guns and the modern rifle completely in the shade. His weapons are his legs and his arsenal are the heaps of refuse that are carelessly allowed to collect and rot in the summer heat. Unless he is stopped by screens, poison or sticky fly paper, he enters the homes of the rich and poor alike, and leaves there typhoid, consumption, scarlet fever, diphtheria, smallpox, cholera, infantum, and scores of other diseases.

The early spring is the time to swat him. Then he is just waking up from his long hibernation, and is not very active. His arsenal are not ready for him, for the sun has not been hot enough to produce the bacilli with which he carries on his warfare against humanity. But when the weather gets hot, his ammunition is ready and he is strong and active.

The fly hates coal oil. A small dose of it puts the garbage can out of commission as an arsenal, and a refuse heap simulating treated will remain flyless. A little on a pool of standing water will leave the fly thirsty on its banks. Some kerosene or chloride of lime on a manure heap will kill the flies' eggs and prevent their propagation.

Dead flies are nearly as dangerous as live ones, and should be burned, as they are covered with bacilli. Water, milk, fruit, meat and any food that has been contaminated by the touch of flies should be destroyed at once. Cleanliness is the greatest and most successful enemy of the fly, and should be taught and enforced by law as far as possible. Every householder should be required to have screens on every door and window of his dwelling. Education should supplement the work of the law. Children and adults should be taught the necessity of swatting the fly on all occasions. He is a greater danger than the "yellow peril" or the "terrible Turk," and should be treated as a national menace without mercy or compunction.

The ladies, with their customary thoughtfulness, had provided ice cream, cake, etc., which were served until everyone had sufficient. The singing of "God be with you till we meet again," brought to a close a very pleasant evening.

Address and Presentation

among new faces and in forming fresh acquaintances, the old ones of Cayley will not be forgotten. We desire to further express our appreciation and esteem by presenting to you the accompanying gift. May it ever bring to your mind kindly memories of the little band of co-workers you have left behind.

In closing we most heartily join in best wishes for your future welfare and prosperity. In whatever fields you and Mrs. Bushfield may be called to work, we sincerely trust you may ever find enjoyment and comfort and peace, and that "Even to your old age He will carry and deliver you."

Signed on behalf of Ladies' Aid, Mrs. Jas. Anderson, President. Hattie Wickens, Secretary. Cayley, June 9, 1911.

Rev. Bushfield replied for Mrs. Bushfield and himself, and in very fitting words expressed the joy they felt in receiving the present. Some fields he had worked in did not remain so sweet in his memory as Cayley would, and he assured his hearers that the present they had received that evening would not be necessary to remind them of their ministry here, but the friendships they had formed and the co-operation they had received in their work, would linger longer in their memory than any tangible indication. They were going away to a new field amongst strangers to try and carry on the same good work, with the assurance that their efforts had been very much appreciated, and with a greater determination to fulfil the purposes which he felt God had called them to.

The ladies, with their customary thoughtfulness, had provided ice cream, cake, etc., which were served until everyone had sufficient. The singing of "God be with you till we meet again," brought to a close a very pleasant evening.
